

Appendix to Anne Marit Sand, Britt Viola Danielsen, Oddvar Førland, Eirik Abildsnes, Jan Henrik Rosland. Expected deaths at home – a qualitative study of collaboration.
Tidsskr Nor Legeforen 2020; 140. doi:
10.4045/tidsskr.19.0773.

This appendix is a supplement to the article and has not undergone editorial revision.

Table 1. Interview guide for GPs, nurses and other health professionals

Topic	Questions for the GPs	Questions for nurses and assistant nurses
Experience of palliation	What is your experience of treating patients at the end of life?	What is your experience of dying patients who want to spend their last days at home?
Advance care planning	How do you address the fact that the patient has a short life expectancy with the patient and the family? How do you address this if the patient does not initiate such a conversation?	How do you establish collaboration cooperation with the patient and the family? (Advance care planning, early meeting in the home with the GP and homecare nurse)
Availability	How do you ensure your own availability as a GP (for the patient, the family and the homecare services)?
Procedures when death occurs	What about the final phase – and when death has occurred?	How do you proceed when the patient dies at home? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Death certificate (GP/A&E clinic) • Care for the bereaved family • Care for the deceased person – who does what? • Family gathering/wake • Funeral
Use of out-of-hours services	What do you think about transporting the deceased person to the A&E clinic in order to have the death certificate issued when the death is expected?

Suggestions for improvement	Do you have any suggestions or ideas for how such a practice can be changed?	Suggestions for improvements
-----------------------------	--	------------------------------